Putin arrived in Jerusalem's Old City at 1:30 am Tuesday, and made his third visit to the Western Wall, a yarmulke on his head, commenting on the deep Jewish connection to the holy site: "You can see how the Jewish past is engraved in the stones of Jerusalem."

During the course of his visit, Putin spoke with other visitors at the site, asked many questions, and according to Yedioth Ahronoth, chatted at length with an ultra-Orthodox immigrant from the former Soviet Union.

The Russian president also received a book in Russian about the Western Wall tunnels, and asked to visit the tunnels himself.
